Unbound By Place or Time: Museums and Online Learning William B. Crow, Herminia Din

This title examines how online learning environments provide a powerful set of new tools for museum educators to vastly expand the museums audience and create new ways of interacting with visitors, online and on site. Providing practical advice and case studies while advocating a learner-centric, participatory model of education, the book challenges museums to re-examine their roles as 21st-century educational institutions.
