Anna always thought that she'd marry a respectable man.

Maybe someone who ran their own store. She never thought that she'd fall for a ranch hand until Jacob came to town. He swept her off of her feet, and with her trying to keep her father's store together all on her own, she could use an extra pair of hands. Offering to help with the repairs, they start to spend more time than they thought together.

One thing leads to another, and Anna finds herself over her head in a passion filled romance with the cowboy of her dreams.
